

How to Find and Prepare for Baccalaureate-MD Programs

Baccalaureate-MD programs can be a great option for high school seniors considering careers in medicine. If you're a high school student, talk with your school counselor about programs that may be good options for you. You can use the MSAR website to search for medical schools with baccalaureate-MD programs. Also, explore opportunities at your school or in your community to get engaged in health care issues and shadow health care professionals. These experiences will help you understand how you fit within a career in medicine and perhaps even the kind of medical setting that suits your interests, aptitudes, goals, and personality.

Each year, new programs are being developed, and many are aimed toward creating an option for students who are traditionally unrepresented in medicine. In Chapter 4, you can read more about diversity initiatives in medicine; in Chapter 7, you can find more information about the holistic review of candidates who apply to medical school. With this in mind, you can use the worksheet at the end of this chapter to evaluate the mission statements of the programs you are interested in and decide which ones may be a good fit for you.
